THE PRACTICAL MINI GUIDE

Your first steps in Austria

Meldezettel, residence documents, insurance and preparing for work.

Inside this guide

Start the three-day process after actual move-in / Prepare a separate signed form for each person / Separate Meldezettel from your right to remain

GOOD TO KNOW

01 Start the three-day process after actual move-in

Find the registration authority responsible for your new accommodation: the municipal office, the municipal administration in a chartered city or the district office in Vienna. The general deadline is three days after moving into the accommodation, rather than after signing the rental agreement. Registration must reflect an actual stay; a convenient postal address is not enough.

02 Prepare a separate signed form for each person

For the ordinary procedure, complete the registration form clearly and obtain the accommodation provider’s signature. The provider is the person who actually supplies the accommodation; this can be the owner, main tenant or another relevant person depending on the arrangement. Prepare the identity and civil-status evidence requested by the authority. Each person needs a separate form. If you intend to submit documents remotely, check the accepted method and required originals or certified copies before sending anything.

GOOD TO KNOW

03 Separate Meldezettel from your right to remain

An address registration does not establish immigration permission or a right to work. EU, EEA and Swiss citizens staying longer may need a separate Anmeldebescheinigung under their residence rules; this is not the Meldezettel. People from third countries must check the residence route relevant to their circumstances. Ukrainians seeking temporary protection should follow the official police-registration and BFA guidance about the Ausweis für Vertriebene. If protection already exists in another country, clarify the implications before transferring your living arrangements.

04 Confirm insurance and keep essential records together

Ask which route provides your health coverage and from which date it applies. Employment, self-employment, co-insurance and other circumstances can lead to different arrangements. Austrian employees are commonly insured through ÖGK, while SVS is relevant for many self-employed people. An e-card is evidence of coverage, not a replacement for establishing insurance eligibility. Do not assume the address registration creates insurance.

GOOD TO KNOW

05 Identify your actual access to employment

Start with the residence document you hold rather than nationality alone. EU, EEA and Swiss citizens have free access to the Austrian labour market under the relevant rules. Displaced Ukrainians who possess an Ausweis für Vertriebene can take employed work without a separate employment permit under the exemption described by the Austrian ministry. Other third-country applicants must check their specific residence and employment route.

06 Use AMS and check professional recognition early

The Austrian Public Employment Service, AMS, offers job-search information and support according to the applicant’s circumstances. Prepare a CV with experience, qualifications, language skills and a clear way to contact you. For regulated professions, recognition or authorisation may be necessary before practising. A translated diploma does not by itself provide professional permission. Use an official recognition advisory service to establish which authority and evidence are relevant to your occupation.

Common questions

Are Meldezettel and Anmeldebescheinigung the same document?

No. The address-registration form and confirmation concern where you live. An Anmeldebescheinigung concerns residence rights for qualifying EU, EEA and Swiss citizens. Other newcomers have different residence documents. Check the required process according to your nationality, duration of stay and personal circumstances.

Can I register before I actually move in?

The official procedure requires actual accommodation. The accommodation provider confirms it by signing the form. A future rental contract or postal address alone is not a substitute. Check with the responsible registration authority if your accommodation arrangement is unusual or temporary.

Does an Austrian registered address mean I already have health insurance?

No. Confirm your coverage with the responsible insurer or support authority. The relevant route may depend on employment, self-employment, family arrangements or other circumstances. Keep written evidence of the coverage start date and ask what to use while waiting for an e-card.
